I can't afford it VS how can I afford it; a statement VS a question they went to school and never learn how money work. Rich dad & poor dad so they work for money all life The poor and the middle class work for money. The rich have money work for them. "I' ve met so many people who say, 'Oh, I'm not interested in money.' Yet they'll work at a job for eight Money works for you hours a day. That's a denial of truth. If they weren't interested in money, then why are they working? Intelligence solves problems and produces money. Money without financial intelligence is money soon aone Accounting is possibly the most confusing, boring Learn financial literacy subject in the world, but if you want to be rich longterm, it could be the most important subject. •The rich buy assets. •The poor only have expenses. •The middle class buy liabilities they think are assets Mind your own business The reality is that the rich are not taxed. It's the middle class who pays for the poor, especially the educated upper-income middle class. Taxes & corporations Rich dad & poor dad ≡ During all the years I studied and learned from him, he always reminded me that knowledge is power. And with money comes great power that requires the right knowledge to keep it and make it multiply. Without that knowledge, the world pushes "Workers work hard enough to not be fired, and the rich invent money owners pay just enough so that workers won't quit." Work to learn; don't work for money We all have tremendous potential, and we all are blessed with gifts. Yet the one thing that holds all of us back is some degree of self-doubt. It is not so much the lack of technical information that holds us back, but more the lack of self-confidence. Some are more affected than others. Most people never win because they're more afraid of losing. will list a few: first, the "don't wants," for they create the "wants." I don't want to work all my life. I don't want what my parents aspired for, which was job security and a house in the suburbs. I don't like being an employee. I hated that my dad always missed my football games because he was so busy working on his 鸡汤大集合 career. I hated it when my dad worked hard all his life and the government took most of what he worked for at his death. He could not even pass on what he worked so hard for when he died. The rich don't do that. They work hard and pass it on to their children. Now the "wants." I want to be free to travel the world and live in the lifestyle I love. I want to be young when I do this. I want to simply be free. I want control over my time and my life. I want money to work for me.
